A tribute to Artists

The Dunolly Neighbourhood Centre Third Annual Arts Show was held over the weekend of 3rd & 4th November and I was privileged to be asked to officially open it.

The speeches and prize announcement were set to be at 1pm; however, as the crowds were transient, traipsing in and out, Lynda thought we better start while we had a good lot of people. We began at around 12.50pm and finished just a few minutes after 1pm. At that point there was a huge influx of people - you can't predict these things.

In any case my speech was not that important. What people came for was to view the wonderful exhibits created by our talented crafts people.

On show were many different mediums: photography; pencil drawings; paintings; textiles; mosaics; and this year the Dunolly Primary School children entered in a Mini Archi competition.

Each grade submitted portraits of themselves or loved ones in various forms - some straightforward and others with a Picasso-esque flavour. Prizes were awarded as first, second and third for each grade. Well done kids!

Other prize winners are listed under the Arts Hub section on page 10. A huge thank you to Lynda Vater and her crew for putting the show together and to Jan Brock for the yummy nibbles.

ROSIE'S RAMBLE

Don't forget the Remembrance Day ceremony will be held on Sunday 11th November at 10.45am at the Cenotaph at the Post Office. One hundred years since the end of the War to end all Wars.

I reckon our house is haunted. The unknown perfume I used to notice in the passage is gone, but odd things happen. I bought a pair of kitchen scissors with red handles earlier in the year, and they vanished a few weeks ago. I then bought a replacement pair with lime handles. My gran would have had a fit - she really hated that colour, but they were the only ones available at the time. The other night I reached into the drawer where the scissors live, used them and then noticed to my surprise that the handles were RED! At first I thought they were Sister Ramble's, but hers were outside. Now, I can't find the green-handled pair! Confused? Me too. I don't know what a spook would actually do with scissors.

I took a drive around Thomas Street the other evening just to fill in the time, and was startled to see a small herd of big hairy cattle, some of which had enormous horns. I suppose they are highland cattle or yaks? I am open to correction on either count.

I've had a sore arm for a whole week, and have to be careful not to get the dressing wet etc. It is a real pest. However, it has made me admire even more, people who have to manage life with missing limbs every day of their lives.

Travels with Cynthia

Before Liz returned home from our travels, we spent our last couple of weeks still staying at the Union Jack Club in London; me re-visiting all the old places of twenty years before and all new to Liz, then Mike arrived to join me.

After a few days we flew to Ireland, Mike's birthplace, and hired a car to tour through Ireland and Scotland, my father's birthplace.

Unfortunately we discovered that there was a condition on the car - we were not allowed to cross the border into Northern Ireland where

Mike had been planning to visit his cousins. As a result I met them all by telephone.

Mike said we would have to visit Dublin's famous pub, O'Donoghues, but he didn't find it very familiar and was puzzled because he said there should have been a monument in the centre of the road junction. We later discovered that since all those years ago two more pubs with the same name had sprung up, so we never found the original.

Then we drove south to Carrickallen, a village in County Cavan, where Mike's mother's sister, Auntie Annie, still lived. When we came to a crossroad with two signs to Carrickallen, each pointing a different way, we were really bushed as there was no mileage written on either, so we had to take pot luck and randomly choose; of course we were told we had taken a much longer route. But what did we care. On the way we picked up a young man in hiking boots and a rucksack and he asked to be dropped off at Ballynagh, so Mike pulled over when we came to that sign, but our passenger said "No, no, not Ballynagh, Bellananagh", which was further along the road. Words failed us. So now we really are in Ireland, thought I.

Aunty Annie's house was right in the village, just like all the others, two up and two down. She was very excited to take us upstairs to show us her new inside toilet, only recently installed. But we were stunned to see it sitting in her bedroom, starkly against the wall, no booth, no screen, just in its shiny splendour. I realised I would have to make sure Annie wasn't in bed if the need arose.

One morning we decided to go down to the village shop and buy things to make Annie a nice breakfast. It was well after nine but Con Dolan's was shut, so we asked an old man on the seat outside what time did Dolan's open. "Oh whenever he feels like it" was the reply. When we did go in, we found he stocked a bit of everything, including a little bar where customers would take a nip while waiting for their goods to be boxed. We discovered that nearly all the shops had their little side bar. Amazingly, lots of old people recognised Mike's name and they would say "Well if it isn't Maurice and Kath Lindsay's boy and now he has a lovely wife."

Ah Ireland, dear Ireland, I love you.

ARTS and ENTERTAINMENT

Commonwealth Acts old books

The Port Fairy museum & archives contacted other historical societies around the state to offer a set of 17 leather-bound Commonwealth Acts books from 1917 to 1933. These were of interest to the Dunolly Historic Precinct for display in the Court House.

I was able to pick them up on Sunday as I was nearby in Warrnambool with the Melba recital. These lovely old books have many hand written notes in the margins and will make a fitting display in the Dunolly Court House. The Port Fairy museum is in the old Port Fairy Court House and is worth a visit if you are in the area. Our historical groups do a fine job of sharing information and items of interest. Thanks to Anne McLean, Peter and Andrea from the Port Fairy Museum & Archives.

The Art of the Motorcycle

The Inglewood Town Hall made an excellent art exhibition space for Greg Holland and the other local artists. The exhibition is part of the Inglewood Alive weekend. Congratulations to all of the artists.

Dunolly's Monthly Collectors Event

Our second in the series of 'Collections, Connections and Cocktails' is to be held at Thrifty on Broadway on Saturday 17th November.

In this fun get-together, we look at some of the motivations behind people's collections and share our common interests, all learning something in the process.

Some of my own pieces (photo attached), I purchased over the years because they were the same as grandparents or elderly aunts had once owned during the 1950s. For me, just one of the many instances of attempting to recreate some childhood memories of these people and only one of the multitude of reasons for starting a collection.

We would like you to join us on 17th November between 2:00pm and 3:30pm, at Susan Day's shop, Thrifty on Broadway. Please bring along something from one of your own collections to show and share its story.

Tickets are $5.00, this includes retro-inspired nibbles and mocktails. Frances Clarke, from Matilda's of Tarnagulla, will also be there to show some examples from one of her own collections.

Looking forward to seeing you there.

Writers' Workshop

Last Thursday, 1st November, Jenny Scott and I attended the Writers' Workshop held at the Avoca Arts and Garden Gallery. This is the old Avoca railway station that has been converted into an Arts hub.

The person holding the workshop was Stacey McCoy a writer of a number of books. Stacey advised us budding writers exactly how to go about self-publishing a book and practical solutions to formatting and sculpting a story for the best impact.

It was an intimate workshop of only four participants which made for a very personalised class. We were able to ask questions and receive answers as a one-on-one, which may have not been possible in a larger group. It was a rewarding experience.

The countdown is on to 2018 Energy Breakthrough

With approximately three weeks until the 2018 Energy Breakthrough, event preparations have ramped up and the countdown is on! The 2018 event will be staged in Maryborough at Princes Park from 21 to 25 November.

Held annually in the Central Goldfields Shire, the award-winning event is the largest and most significant event on our local events calendar:

- 8,000 direct participants
- 12,000 spectators
- The event accounts for 16.5% of annual tourism visits to the Central Goldfields Shire.
- $4.95 million injected into the local economy in 2017

Central Goldfields Shire Administrator Hugh Delahunty said the significance of the Energy Breakthrough should not be underestimated.

"The benefits of this major event are two-fold. Not only does it inspire students from across Australia to embrace learning and be creative and innovative but it also brings important tourism dollars to our community.

"Accommodation is at capacity, our restaurants and cafes are busy and other local businesses enjoy the flow on effects that only an event of this size and calibre can bring.

"We look forward to welcoming around 8,000 students as well as their families and friends to our community in November."

The Energy Breakthrough is a joint initiative of Central Goldfields Shire Council and the Country Education Project.

It is also made possible thanks to sponsorship from the State Government, VicRoads, La Trobe University, Central Highlands Water, True Foods and the Country Education Partnership.

CAMP

Our camping program at Dunolly PS involves a 4 year rotation of locations starting with students in year 3. Over their time from year 3 – 6 students experience adventure type camps in bush settings at Malmsbury and Creswick for 2 nights/3 days, a city experience in Melbourne, and a beach experience at Queenscliff for 4 nights/5 days. Camps are seen as an integral part of the school curriculum and all students are expected to attend. They enable students to explore, extend and enrich their learning and their social skills development, in a non-school setting. Why all students are expected to attend camps and what are the benefits:

- To provide shared class and year level experiences, team building and a sense of group cohesiveness.
- To reinforce and extend classroom learning.
- To provide a program that delivers skills and knowledge that may lead to a lifelong involvement in worthwhile leisure pursuits.
- To provide a program that promotes self-esteem, resourcefulness, independence, leadership judgement, cooperation and tolerance.
- To further develop their problem solving and life survival skills
- To extend understanding of their physical and cultural environment

Teachers support students' many and varied needs to enable them to achieve success. We work with families who might have financial constraints and students who may have medical concerns such as bed wetting. Staff are highly professional and discreet in ensuring all students can attend.

SUCCESS STORIES

There are always many success stories from camps. From the student who was overwhelmed and very emotional about getting on the bus to five minutes later smiling and being relaxed, and now hasn't looked back and is having an amazing time. We have had two students who were very reluctant to have a go at surfing off the side of the boat. Miss Holding supported those students and gave them great encouragement to have a go. Through this support they gave way to their fears and had a go. They now have a great sense of achievement with a comment of 'Miss Holding I can't believe I conquered my fear of the ocean!' What a great character building and self-esteem boosting time for our students!

Changing Times

12:59 Friday Nov. 7: Anti-resurrection laws were due to be enacted today at 13:00 hours. David had taken a passing interest in the debate and had been mildly swayed by the finite Earth argument. It made sense that the Earth's capacity to feed and nurture its freight of humanity could be exceeded. Limiting those numbers would increase everybody's quality of life. And, of course, there was always the possibility of inadvertently rearranging time-lines. Of more pressing concern at the moment, was today's forecast of high winds. The Weather Bureau was warning of possible damaging gusts and issuing advice not to park under trees and to secure all loose objects. David looked across to his wife, Ingrid, who was driving their ute. Light caught her prominent cheek bones and alabaster skin. Her straw-blonde hair was tied back in a pony-tail and she often boasted of her Nordic-Viking heritage. The timing of the weather event could have been better. Ingrid was a physiotherapist and was using some of her rostered time off. David was a wool-classer and had begged off for the afternoon. He had promised to make up the time. They were currently driving toward a reclamation yard with a trailer in tow. It had been Ingrid's idea to purchase some second-hand roofing iron and repurpose it as a fence for their twenty-acre property situated on the outskirts of town. Strictly speaking, it wasn't a hobby farm as such but they did have a few animals to which they were attached. David was twenty seven and Ingrid was twenty five. They had been married three blissful years. The rising wind was buffeting the ute but it wasn't anything Ingrid couldn't handle. The trailer had high caged sides capable of containing their purchase. She steered the ute around a tight bend in the road. A medium-sized eucalypt had recently toppled in the wind and was blocking the highway. Ingrid exited the curve and they were upon the obstacle. The ute smashed into the trunk at speed. The impact shattered the vehicle's steering-arm. Ingrid frantically grappled with the unresponsive steering-wheel as the ute caromed into the scenery. A bristling ironbark tree filled the windscreen. David threw up an arm, cried out and lost consciousness. When David came to, he wished he hadn't. Tiny diamonds of broken windscreen glass filled his hair. He could taste the iron tang of blood in the corner of his mouth. Ingrid's sightless eyes were staring at the cabin roof. Her head listed to one side. Ingrid's neck was broken and she was quite dead. David's life sputtered like the smoking wick of an exhausted candle. He howled like a gibbon - a deep and mournful sound.

12:54 Friday Nov. 7: Five minutes, that was all. David gunned the hire-car through the bends. Five minutes to claw back his previous existence. Five minutes or so before he could be reunited with Ingrid. He had recovered from his injuries but she had died one minute before the ratification of the anti-resurrection laws. Legally he was permitted one immediate attempt to deny history's claim. The clarity of that decision was undeniable. Even so, everything had to go exactly to plan. David repeatedly glanced at his watch. Faster! Faster! He urged himself forward, speeding toward the site of the accident. With four minutes to spare, the car skidded to a halt in a haze of dust next to the fallen tree. David vaulted out of the vehicle and grabbed his trusty chainsaw. He flipped the red button up; primed the machine; shoved his boot through the handle and pulled the cord. The chainsaw stuttered, as it should. David depressed the red button and pulled again ... nothing. He tried a few times more but the chainsaw refused to run. He experienced a sharp surge of nausea. Calm down, he told himself. The carburettor was probably flooded and the chainsaw would run in a minute if he left it alone. Trouble was, he had no minutes to spare. It was all he could do to hold himself in check. With a silent prayer he tried the cord again and the machine started. With no time for relief or to utter thanks David went to work on the tree. He only needed to make three incisions and the resultant pieces would be small enough to push off the highway. He cleared the road and checked his watch. It was almost 12:59 and he could hear the familiar growl made by their ute as it approached. He hoped that he hadn't forgotten anything. It had to be enough ...

12:59 Friday Nov. 7 : "I wonder if Big Bill can give us a hand when we get there," David said.

"I don't see why not," Inyoni replied as she drove the ute. "Physiotherapists exist so that people can regain full mobility." Light caught her prominent cheek bones and ebony skin. Her jet-black hair was tied back in a raffia knot and she often boasted of her African-Zulu heritage. They had been married three blissful years ...

"Um ... isn't that a breach of professional confidentiality, suggesting that?"

Inyoni laughed - the sound always reminded David of tinkling wind-chimes. "But I've told you nothing. You have a rampant imagination my dear."

"In any case, I could deduce a lot of things from the size of him," David said. "I'm sure he comes with a raft of physical ailments - he ain't called Big Bill for nothing." He glanced casually out of the window. "Hey, looks like the council have been around and cleared the road for us. See that chain-sawed tree?"

"Oh yeah. Not surprising really in this windy weather," Inyoni said as they passed the location.

David was content. As far as he was concerned, resurrection and paradise went hand in hand. He smiled at the thought.

SNAKE SEASON

With the warm weather now here snakes are becoming more active and a lot more visible.

Eastern Brown Snakes are most common in our region with the occasional Tiger Snake or Red Bellied Black Snake usually found around wetlands, creeks and rivers.

Some key points to remember about living in or visiting an area with snakes:

1. When left alone, snakes present little or no danger to people.
2. If you see a snake, keep calm and move yourself and anyone with you (including pets) away from the area.
3. Don't attempt to capture or harm snakes.
4. Maintain lawns and clean up around your house, as snakes are attracted to shelter such as piles of rocks and timber, sheets of metal, and building materials.
5. Undertake first-aid training and ensure your first aid kit contains several compression bandages, and if someone is bitten, call 000 immediately.

If you encounter a snake, contact DELWP on 136 186 and they will put you in touch with your nearest snake catcher.

PHILLIPS GARDENS PUBLIC TOILET UPGRADE

The works will be carried out by Council's Building and Maintenance team and will mean the public toilet facilities will be closed for two weeks. The nearest public toilets are located in Clarendon Street, opposite the Maryborough Courthouse and also the Woolworths Car Park.

FIRE RESTRICTIONS

The CFA Chief Officer has approved the commencement of fire restrictions in the Central Goldfields Shire on Monday 12th November, 2018. After this date, residents will be unable to burn off and some activities will require a permit.

We will remember them

This Sunday, 11th November is Remembrance Day. It is a time to pause and remember those who have died and been injured in wars, conflicts and peacekeeping operations. This year's Remembrance Day also marks the 100th anniversary of the signing of the Armistice, bringing the First World War to an end.

In recognition of the day, please wear a red poppy as a symbol of remembrance. Please also ensure you stop at 11am on Sunday to observe one minute's silence, and reflect on the service and sacrifice of all our defence personnel and that of their families.

Official opening of Wedderburn streetscape project

On Tuesday 13th November, I will join the Wedderburn community to celebrate the official opening of the Wedderburn Streetscape Improvement Project. The project has certainly revitalised the streetscape, making the area more visually appealing, opening up the main street and its surrounds, and making it more accessible. Landscaping and new street furniture have further complemented the works. The project is a credit to the Wedderburn community and businesses, as well as contractor Avard Civil and Council. The $3.3 million project was made possible thanks to funding from the Federal Government, Regional Development Victoria and Council. The celebrations will also include the burial of the Wedderburn Lions Club time capsule beneath the footpath in front of Soldiers' Memorial Park. The time capsule is part of the centenary celebrations of Lions International and provides future residents of Wedderburn (and the Shire) a look at the day-to-day life of the town from our current era. The Wedderburn streetscape opening will take place at 12.20pm in front of Soldiers' Memorial Park. Members of the public are invited to attend.

Kia-Ora congratulations

Last month I mentioned that Yarrowalla's Kia-Ora Piggery had become a finalist in the Victorian Regional Achievement and Community Awards. I'm pleased to report that Kia-Ora Piggery won the award for their category – the Department of Environment, Land, Water and Planning Diversity and Inclusion Award. The company received the award at a presentation evening on 26th October. I'd like to congratulate Kia-Ora Piggery on this fantastic achievement. It is a well-deserved recognition of a company that is behind the success of our wonderful multicultural population in Pyramid Hill.

More congratulations

I'd also like to congratulate Bridgewater Compost on receiving a $500,000 grant from the State Government's Regional Jobs and Infrastructure Fund. The grant will go towards the company's new advanced organic mushroom production facility at Newbridge. Bridgewater Compost is investing $7.8 million in the facility, enabling it to purchase plant and equipment to produce 25 tonnes of organically grown mushrooms per week, creating 20 new full-time jobs. This is a great investment in our Shire.

Fire cabin installed in time for fire season

A new fire observer cabin has been set atop the Mt Tarrengower lookout tower in Maldon, just in time for the start of what is expected to be an above average fire season.

As part of the $1.2 million project undertaken by the Department of Environment Land Water and Planning (DELWP) to upgrade the Fire tower, project officer Fire Towers and Airbases, Andrew Johnstone, said the six-tonne cabin went into position as planned last week and is expected to be operational within the next two weeks. "It took 20 minutes for project contractor, JC Butko Engineering to lift the cabin into position, including adjusting the top of the frame to ensure it fit securely, then it was welded into place," Mr Johnstone said.

"Now the cabin is fixed in place, work is continuing on the internal fit out including installing power and vital communications systems."

DELWP is undertaking the work to ensure the cabin meets health and safety standards as well as improving amenity and safety for visitors to the lookout, Mr Johnstone said.

"The new cabin will provide improved working conditions for the fire tower observer who can spend up to 10 hours a day in the cabin over the summer" he said.

The new cabin looks quite similar to the old one but is slightly bigger, has larger windows with UV protection and better access for the fire tower observer. Instead of the fire tower observer entering the cabin via a trapdoor in the floor, entry will be via the walkway, around the cabin.

"The project also includes removing the old lead-based paint from the tower, undertaking some structural repairs then repainting the tower.

"After the cabin is operational, the contractors will complete the works on the tower structure including replacing the ladders that connect each level and replacing three viewing platforms.

"Scaffolding will be removed in stages as the tower works are completed.

"Once structural work is completed, we're on the home stretch and the contractors will do minor touch ups to paint work and then final checks.

"The entire Mt Tarrengower Tower refurbishment project is estimated to be completed and open to the public by Christmas, weather permitting."

This tower upgrade is part of the Reducing Bushfire Risk program that further reduces risk on public land by supporting early detection and rapid suppression of fires through fuel management, up-grading fire towers, building new bridges and improving roads.

Where Blood Red Poppies Grow

Here we stand, though not on Flanders Field
In the eleven o'clock glow
To reminisce of our great heroes who lie
Where blood red poppies grow.

A hundred years have passed to where
We see the cross row on row
On some lonely bayonet Belgium field
Where blood red poppies grow

Say! Do you see an empty chair in a room
A photo of one we don't know
Who sleeps out on foreign fields of doom
Where blood red poppies grow.

A hundred years of a million tears
Alas! We can't live long ago
They're not here, loved ones gone in misty tears
Where blood red poppies grow.

An awful silence rests on each soldier's grave
Of those we'll never know
Our broken hearts, their lives they gave
Where blood red poppies grow.

So stand for one minute on a November 11th day
At the 11th hour as memory's winds blow
We keep them in our heart, but they sleep
Where blood red poppies grow.
