Animal Collisions Jump 22%

nimal collisions have increased by 22% year-on-year according to new claims data from national insurer AAMI.

Leah James, AAMI Motor Claims Manager said, "This year, our research tells us almost half of Aussie drivers ignore wildlife warning signs - a concerning statistic as we head into winter when this is more likely to occur. AAMI's research found only around a quarter of Aussies would keep driving, even if it meant hitting an animal and damaging their car. What people might not know is that it can be more dangerous to swerve to avoid hitting an animal than to keep driving."

New alarming research from AAMI found more than 40% of Aussie drivers don't pay attention to wildlife warning signs, and most drivers (60%) would dangerously swerve or slam on the brakes to avoid colliding with an animal, putting themselves and other drivers at risk.

The research found 1 in 10 Aussies don't know what they would do if they crashed into an animal.

More than half (54%) of Aussie drivers have been involved in an animal collision, with the majority of these occurring on rural and regional roads.

Analysis of more than 21,000 AAMI animal collision claims across the country in 2023 found:

NSW is the most dangerous state for wildlife collisions (30 per cent), followed by VIC (29 per cent) and QLD (24 per cent). In the previous two years, VIC was the most dangerous, followed by NSW and QLD.

Dubbo in New South Wales holds the dubious title of Australia's worst animal collision hotspot, followed by Sunbury in Victoria and Goulburn in New South Wales.

The animal species involved in most crashes are; kangaroos, wallabies, wombats, deer, dogs, cows, emus, pigs, fox and rabbit*.

In Australia, the cooler months are the worst time of year for animal collisions, with more than a quarter (28%) of road accidents involving wildlife taking place between June to August. Almost 60 per cent (58%) of all animal collisions occur between May and October.

Worst Drivers & Car Models

- Male drivers and those middle aged (between 45-54, followed closely by 55-64) are most likely to find themselves in a collision with an animal.
- Cars most likely to be involved in an animal collision are:
 - Toyota Landcruiser
 - Toyota Hilux
 - Ford Ranger
 - > Toyota Corolla
 - Holden Commodore
- White vehicles, followed by grey and silver are most likely to collide with an animal.

Dusk is the most dangerous time for animal collisions, with a quarter of accidents occurring from 4:30pm-8pm.

Animal collisions can be costly, with the average cost of an insurance claim greater than $5,000.

In 16 % of claims involving an animal in the last year alone, the damage to the vehicle was so severe, the car was written off. Saturday is the worst day of the week for wildlife related road accidents – with almost one third (31%) of incidents taking place over the weekend.

Letters & Notices

Photos taken last week showing the damage

Re: Letter on Halls Garage

Dear Editor,

With Reference to last week's Letter from Marilyn Goldie regarding the current dangerous state of Hall's Garage.

This dump of a place has been like this since the week before Easter (24 March). Twice I have sent photos to the Shire though the "snap send, solve" app. and nothing has happened. NO reply from the shire, nothing.

This place is only partially fenced, it's unsafe and like Marilyn wrote, someone smashed a big window in, which now hangs perilously, ready to fall onto someone.

The place doesn't leave a good impression on Dunolly visitors.

* EMBROIDERY

By. Vicky Frizzell

I have taken up embroidery again lately, surprising myself no end. When I was in primary school - so many years ago - we had to learn sewing once we got to grade three. Embroidering tea towels was what we did. Our mothers used to buy us a length of tea towel which came off a large roll. They also bought iron-on embroidery patterns and some thread and had to hem the tea towel for us.

Both my older sisters had been through this process and their completed tea towels were regularly used by our family so I was looking forward to the whole thing. Mum got me a little girl feeding a dog and I was allowed to help position it and then iron it on. It was exciting. There was even a little bag to put it all in.

Threading the needle was the first hurdle, who knew it would be so difficult. Then the teacher wanted different stitches in different places, and the back had to be as neat as the front. That never happened. No neatly sewn joins for me. Every knot was a hand tied affair. The next problem was the droplets of blood scattered all over it. They did look quite pretty at first but soon dried to ugly brown blobs.

Because we all had to sit at our desks for the sewing lesson it was easy for thread to get tangled everywhere, or fall into the inkwell, or get claimed by another girl who was a better sewer and fancied one of your colours. In all the years I did sewing at school I never finished a single item.

So it amazed me when I picked up a needle and thread recently and enjoyed doing embroidery. This time I don't care about the neatness of the back and can only remember two or three stitches, but I don't care. It is a relaxing thing to do at night with the tv going in the background. So far the family haven't complained about all the unwanted things they have to take. They really are all very kind.

SUNNY WARM MARKET DAY

The day did not just "thaw" from the freezingly cold night but the sun shone strong and bright for our Dunolly Community Market Day last Sunday. It was gloriously warm as visitors were happy to stroll and pick up some lovely wares, many of which were locally made or grown.

Our Dunolly Museum welcomed history enthusiasts and the Dunolly Historic Precinct opened our gorgeous Town Hall while Music was provided by the Goldfields Music Club - what's not to like?

Catch the fun of the market below and remember next month's market on July 28.

See you there!

HOMEMADE IN MOLIAGUL

The appetizing, mouth-watering waft of home cooking is the first thing you notice when Margo is busy preparing and cooking her honest, flavour-packed, home-cooked meals ready to be delivered on order.

Many may have met Margo McGinley when she and her late husband Barry, ran the Jacket Potato Food Truck at Dunolly's previous Food Truck Night on Mondays.

Now as Margo's Catering launched recently, Margo is offering easy Heat@Home Meals that many are familiar with and love to eat.

"When the Dunolly Café closed, several people mentioned their concern about not being able to access meals that they could easily heat at home for an affordable price. l've done catering before and felt it was important for people in our community to access food they know and love and importantly, can afford from just $8.90...and when someone enjoys the meals you cook - It's a nice feeling." she said.

As her late husband had a gluten intolerance, Margo is very familiar with gluten-free options of her dishes and would be pleased to adapt her existing menu to suit.

"I've done catering before and felt it was important for people in our community to access food they know and love and importantly, can afford..."

Apart from the Curried Sausages, Beef Chow Mein, her range of dishes include but not restricted to: Sweet and Sour Pork (a favourite), Tuna Mornay, Lasagna and Roasts (chicken, pork, beef or lamb) and would like to add Scalloped Potatoes or Cauliflower and Cheese in the near future. Margo will also take requests when possible.

Each week, Margo cooks fresh and then freezes her delicious dishes to be delivered ready for you to Heat@Home and always rotating her stock regularly.

THE MYSTERIOUS STONE CELLAR

By. Charmain Sheppard

Nestled deep in the heart of my property lies a stone cellar shrouded in mystery and history. As you descend the 9 ancient stone steps, the temperature plummets, and an eerie sense of the past envelops you. This underground marvel is not just a structural relic but a storyteller, whispering tales of bygone eras.

Architectural Wonders:

At about 81/2 feet below the surface, the cellar reveals its rugged beauty - a testament to time, with massive wooden beams supporting an arched stone roof, defying gravity with a sturdy elegance. Metal hooks dangle ominously from the beams, perhaps remnants of a different age. In the corners, stone slats jut out, forming natural shelves that hint at the cellar's practical past.

The cellar's construction is a mosaic of stone slices, meticulously arranged at both horizontal and vertical angles. This intricate stonework creates a fortress-like feel, solid -designed to withstand impenetrable the ravages of time.

Stories Whispered in the Dark

Over the years, I've heard countless stories about this enigmatic cellar. One tale speaks of a man who tragically lost his life during its construction or that people once lived in this subterranean sanctuary, seeking refuge from the outside world. The most chilling rumour hints at the cellar being a resting place for the deceased, a macabre notion that sends shivers down the spine. The hooks were probably used to hang meat, preserving it in the cool, constant temperature of the cellar. Each story adds a layer of intrigue, making the cellar a repository of local folklore and speculation.

The Cellar's Many Faces:

The stone cellar's potential uses are as varied as the stories that surround it. Perhaps transforming it into a wine cellar, capitalising on the natural coolness to store fine vintages or a perfect hideaway from bushfires, offering safety in its stone embrace. There's talk of fixing it up and turning it into a tourist attraction, drawing visitors eager to experience a slice of history. Maybe a cosy hangout spot, a unique retreat from the modern world. Practical minds envision it as a storage space for fruits and vegetables, utilising its consistent climate to keep produce fresh. And then there's the whimsical idea of converting it into a swim spa, a luxurious oasis hidden below ground.

The Cellar's Many Faces:
Despite its potential and historical charm, the cellar does harbour some living secrets. During one visit, I spotted a snake slipping into a gap in the stone wall, a stark reminder that nature still claims its hold on this ancient space

Embracing the Mystery:

My stone cellar is more than just a physical space; it's a portal to the past, a canvas for the imagination, and a source of endless stories. Whether viewed as a practical structure or a mystical relic, it invites curiosity and wonder.

Each visit feels like stepping back in time, a chance to uncover new layers of its enigmatic history. So, the next time you descend those 9 stone steps, listen closely — the cellar just might reveal another secret waiting to be told.

KEEP IT LOCAL THESE HOLIDAYS

tourism expert from the University of South Australia is urging travellers to support local destinations and experiences close to home, instead of long-haul international trips, to lessen the impacts of tourism on the environment.

Adjunct Senior Lecturer in Tourism Management, Dr Freya Higgins-Desbiolles recommends travellers be more considerate with their choices of holiday destinations and reflect on the impact of their activities on the environment.

"Tourism should be defined by the local community, with decision-making controlled at the lowest level and an emphasis on the interrelationships between people, place, ecology and all living things. We need to slow down – stay longer, stay local, be thoughtful with our holiday choices. "It's about respecting the destination, looking out for codes of responsibility, and making yourself aware of the culture and what challenges the communities you're visiting are facing. I encourage people to try being more conscious on their next trip – stay in one place longer, travel more slowly, go for nature walks, engage with the culture, try to leave the destination a better place than how you found it " she said.

Tourism Research Australia forecasts that over the next five years, domestic travel will see only moderate growth, largely due to increased competition from international travel, which is set to continue to climb.

There are many resources like Rise Travel Institute or The Travel Foundation that shed light on sustainable, responsible and just tourism.

ere I am again, recovered from Covid. I feel I was very lucky as I was not as sick as a lot of other people have been. Must have been all those vaccinations.

There is not a lot of rambling this week - too tired to do anything much.

I was wondering about the collection of shopping bags in my boot, I reckon they have a mysterious way of reproducing in the dark. Of course, the increase would have nothing to do with only wanting a couple of things at the shop and taking one bag and finding all sorts of necessities which require more than one bag. I do try to get paper or fabric bags when this happens.

The TV that had lost it's picture was terminally ill and will go where the dead sets go.

Luckily there was one in the big lounge that has moved into the room where the fire is.

It is bigger than the other one without being ridiculous.

Got a couple of bags of off-cuts from the woodworkers - they are great kindling.

There are a lot of different shapes, some you can guess what they are from and others are a bit more obscure.

Dinosaur Dig

he Prep/1/2 students have been learning all about dinosaurs as part of our science and humanities studies this term. We finished off the unit with our own dinosaur dig where students paired off to see what bones they could unearth in our designated dig site (the school sandpit!).

There were lots of squeals of excitement as they uncovered a variety of "fossilised dinosaur bones". Our next task was to see if we could complete the puzzle and create a dinosaur skeleton from the bones we found. Success – see a photo of the completed Dunollyosaurus above.

ore than four million Australians are unaware of other health conditions that can increase the risk of heart failure.

Hearts4heart CEO Tanya Hall said "In particular, it is very troubling that only one in three Australians (32%) are aware that kidney disease can increase their risk of heart failure."

Heart failure patients often suffer from multiple comorbidities (cardiovascular and noncardiovascular), such as an irregular heart rate or rhythm, high blood pressure, kidney disease, type 2 diabetes, obesity, iron deficiency, and mental health conditions like anxiety and depression, malnutrition (i.e. a poor diet) and infection.

"Despite the name, heart failure doesn't mean the heart has stopped or failed, it means that the heart is 'failing' to keep up with the body's demands." Ms Hall added.

Heart failure affects people in different ways. In its early stages, heart failure often has no symptoms. Symptoms can start suddenly and be severe (acute heart failure) or they may appear over time and gradually worsen (chronic heart failure).11

Symptoms of heart failure can include:

- Breathlessness during minimal exercise, or when resting
- Sudden weight gain \Rightarrow
- \Rightarrow New or worsening tiredness, dizziness, confusion, or sadness
- Discomfort or swelling in the tummy or lower \Rightarrow
- \Rightarrow Increased trouble sleeping
- Swelling of the legs, ankles, or feet \Rightarrow
- Loss of appetite \Rightarrow
- Dry cough \Rightarrow
- Irregular heartbeat or palpitations \Rightarrow

If you are concerned about yourself, a friend or loved one who may be showing symptoms of heart failure, or to access resources and information, visit www.hearts4heart.org.au.

BEALIBA INDOOR BOWLS

It was a cold, dark, rainy night
When twelve keen bowlers came out to fight.
From way up north, Marg had come
Leaving behind the warmth of the sun.
The teams were up, it's time to play
On to the mats without delay.
Kitty must stay where she is rolled
Some of these shots were very bold.
Gary, Lyle & Heather, were all beaming bright
Three wins they finished with for the night.
Supper was shared, the raffle was won
"It's Gary again", cried someone.
A hot cup of tea, a sausage roll we seek
Then back to do it all again next week.

DFNC NETBALL REPORT

13& Under: The girls came out firing this week, with everyone contributing to a very impressive 45-1 win. The incentive went to the whole team for a great team effort. 15 & Under: They started strong, but Trentham lifted their intensity. Our girls took it to another gear and finished strong playing some fantastic team netball. We won 31-13

17 & Under: It was a tight start with both teams showing some great defensive pressure. Trentham snuck away to a 4 goal lead heading into the last quarter. Although we fought hard we were unable to catch up. We went down 13-16. Incentives went to Ruby and Brianna.

C-Grade: It was a tough day out for the C grade ladies. Although our defenders worked tirelessly unfortunately we found it very hard to convert in the attack end. We went down 4-69.

B-Grade: The ladies started strong and taking a handy lead heading into the second quarter. Trentham came out strong in the second and were able to level the scores heading into the 3rd. Dunolly came out firing in the 3rd and 4th quarter and managed to finish the game 11 goal winners.

A-Grade: We started strong and got away to a handy 7 goal lead. Our intensity dropped in 3rd and 4th and we allowed Trentham to get within 3 goals. A much better last quarter saw us narrowly build our lead and finish 6 goals winners. The final score was 40-34. Incentives went to Kate and Demcy.

DUNOLLY GOLF CLUB

After a cool start to the day, the sun shone on a perfect afternoon for golf last Saturday.

We played a Stableford round, and there were two outstanding results posted. Rick Lovel scored a massive 47 points, by his own admission the best round he has ever played. He could do no wrong! In second place with his best round of the season was Ken Brereton, with a very creditable 41 points. The rest of the field was a long way back. Julie and Shenae Hunt tied for the win in the women's section, whilst the 9 hole winner was Cheryl Lovel, just ahead of Helen Lovel. Nearest the pin awards went to Shenae on the 8th, and Rick on the 16th.

There is still plenty of work to be done prior to our tournament, which is rapidly approaching. The dates for the tournament are Friday the 5th, and Sunday the 7th of July. Please get your entries in as soon as possible. There will be a working bee this Sunday to help get the course ready, so please attend if you can. A whipper snipper would be handy if you have one.
